

The National Academy of Performing Arts

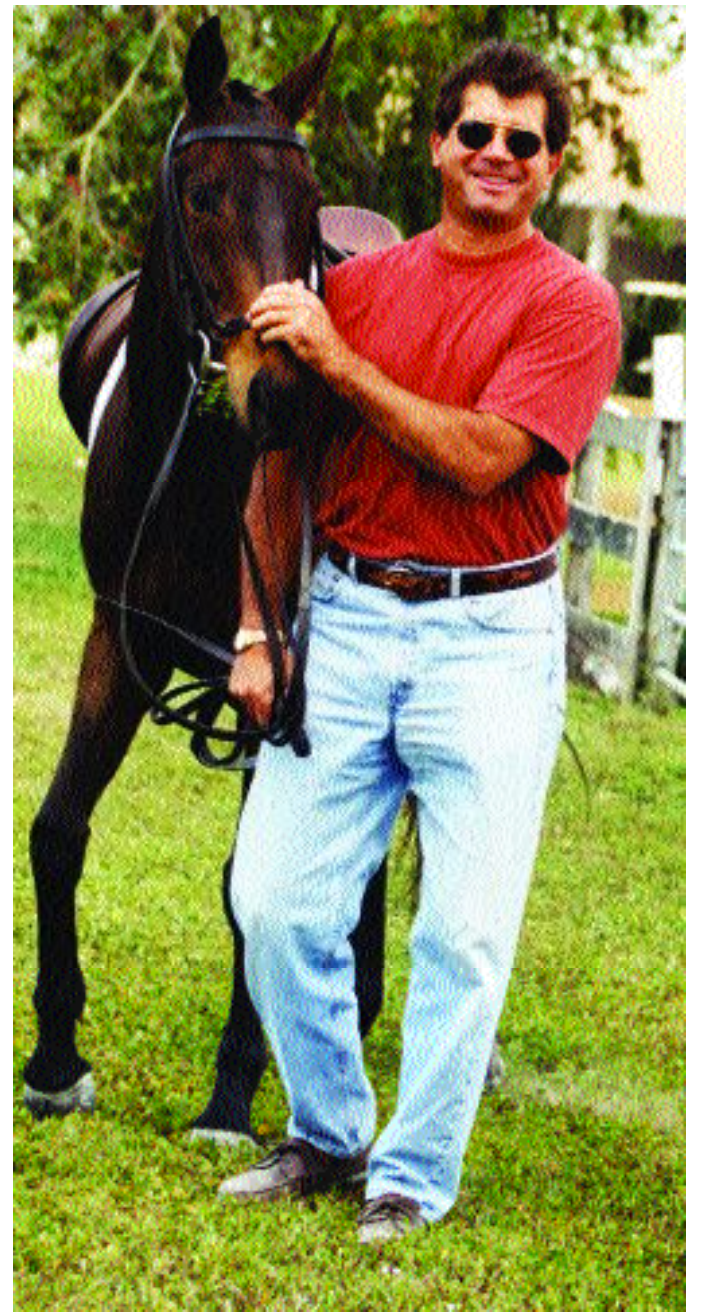

The “National Academy of Performing Arts” at www.4napa.com, led by Andrew Sferra, was created as a charitable organization to raise funds to support and promote the education of under privileged children and young adults in the world of arts and entertainment.

The Web site www.4napa.com is a fun, informative and educational site for all ages. The site includes approximately one thousand one hundred direct pages of information and approximately one thousand linking pages of related and useful information. There are songs to choose and play. Movie clips to watch and listen to. Games to teach music and music composition to young and old children. It is a great site for music and entertainment research for students from elementary school to Graduate school. Please contact Andrew Sferra at 888.748.6614.
